

An Australian Tradition of Reflection on Work

A Pastoral Letter for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker

1 May 2019

Did you know that for over twenty years now the Catholic Church in Australia has marked the Feast of St Joseph the Worker with a pastoral letter? These letters place Catholic Social Teaching in dialogue with current work issues in Australia, making a uniquely Australian contribution to the Church's teachings on work. Initiated and created by laity and bishops together – they come from and belong to the whole church.¹

A Just Wage

Like Catholic Social Teaching internationally, the pastoral letters treat just wages as a key indicator of the justice of our society. Right now the Australian Bishops, with help from our Employment Relations Reference Group, are arguing at the Fair Work Commission for the National Minimum Wage to be set at a level that would make it a living wage.² In doing so, we stand in a tradition reaching back to Leo XIII's 1891 encyclical Rerum Novarum (On the Condition of the Working Classes).³ We continue to argue that it is only fair that anyone working full time should receive a wage that is at least sufficient to support themselves and their family. Every working family should be able to live in 'frugal comfort' as Leo XIII put it.⁴ It is shameful that there is such a thing as low wage poverty in Australia today.

The Value of Unpaid Work

Work is not limited to paid employment. The pastoral letters affirm that people "who without pay care for children, the elderly or infirm" and "those who are volunteers in all kinds of community activities, are workers too."⁵ Furthermore, valuable unpaid work "is frequently done by women."⁶ The 1999 pastoral letter acknowledged that "work that is not paid for is often taken for granted and accorded little esteem" and that even church communities themselves "sometimes ask for a lot of voluntary work without valuing this work or honoring the people who provide these services."⁷

Today I want to thank all the volunteers in parishes and community organizations, in Catholic social services, aged care and health care organizations, as well as those caring for family members. Your work makes God's love more visible in the world.

The Social Wage

The structure of the labour market and the composition of the workforce have changed a great deal in the last twenty years, and the pastoral letters reflect how our teachings have developed in dialogue with these realities. From the mid-twentieth century the teachings began to take into account the increasing involvement of the state in economic and social life, especially through social welfare or social security systems.

Just wages remain necessary, but they are no longer sufficient to ensure a just society - "in addition to fair wages, the taxation and social security systems also have a role to play."⁸ Hence the pastoral letters have also considered the justice of the 'social wage'. For example, the 2013 pastoral letter calls for income support allowances to be increased so that they don't leave people and families in poverty, however, six years later, people relying on Newstart are still waiting for an increase.⁹

Unemployment

The 2017 pastoral letter explains that "the decline of full-time permanent work, increasing casualization of jobs and the entrenched disadvantage of people who are excluded mean that the two issues of insecure employment and unemployment have been constant themes on each Feast Day of St Joseph the Worker."¹⁰ The pastoral letters remind us that work "is part of our vocation as Christians" and that through it we "participate with God in the ongoing act of creation."¹¹ It is a way of developing our skills, expressing ourselves, participating in society, and contributing to the common good of the community. Consequently, much more than an income is lost when people are unemployed!

An Economy of Inclusion

It is simplistic and unfair to see unemployment as a matter of personal failure when our economy has failed to ensure the availability of adequate employment.¹² It is not yet the economy of social inclusion that Pope Francis calls for!¹³

Opinions may differ on what will best serve the common good, but let us remember that the common good is not served when vulnerable or disadvantaged people and groups are left out. As we approach the Federal election, let us revisit the invitation of the 2014 pastoral letter:

“Think of the older worker made redundant by technology and becoming ‘long-term unemployed’; a son or daughter completing their training but frustrated in the search for a job; a single mother trying to make ends meet on the Newstart Allowance; a household with work but still below the poverty line.”¹⁴

Knowing our Tradition

The pastoral letters for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker might not be well known, but they are a useful resource for reflection and action on contemporary work issues. The most recent pastoral letters can be found online at <https://socialjustice.catholic.org.au/publications/pastoral-letters> and those for 1998 – 2009 and for 2010 – 2015 are available in two small booklets in the Social Justice Series published by the Australian Catholic Social Justice Council.

I recommend the pastoral letters for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker to you for your prayer and reflection, and hope to continue this tradition in the coming years.

Bishop Terence Brady

Bishops’ Delegate for Social Justice
Australian Catholic Bishops Conference

1 May 2019

Notes

- 1 Bishop Kevin Manning, Bishop William Brennan, Bishop William Morris, and Bishop Christopher Saunders, (2009), Work and Dignity: Pastoral Letters for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker 1998 – 2009, Australian Catholic Social Justice Council, Social Justice Series No 66, Foreword.
- 2 Australian Catholic Bishops Conference, (2019), Annual Wage Review 2018-19: Living Wage Claim and Submission, 15 March 2019. <https://www.catholic.org.au/acbc-media/media-centre/media-releases-new/2179-acbc-annual-wage-review-submission-2019/file> Accessed 4 April 2019.
- 3 Leo XIII, (1891), Rerum Novarum, n 34.
- 4 Ibid.
- 5 Bishop Kevin Manning, (1998), “Industrial Relations Now: Pastoral Statement for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker”, in Manning et. al., 5.
- 6 Ibid.
- 7 Bishop Kevin Manning, (1999), “The Dignity and Creativity of Work: Pastoral Letter for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker”, in Manning et al, op cit., 12.
- 8 Bishop William Brennan, (2001), “The Rights of Workers Made Redundant”, in Manning et. al., op. cit., 17.
- 9 Bishop Christopher Saunders, (2013), “Time for a New Start: a call to increase allowance payments”, in Bishop Christopher Saunders, (2016), Putting People First: Pastoral Statements for the Feast of St Joseph the Worker 2010 – 2015, Social Justice Series No 78, Australian Catholic Social Justice Council, Sydney.
- 10 Bishop Vincent Long, (2017), The Right to Work: Our Shared Responsibility, <https://socialjustice.catholic.org.au/publications/pastoral-letters/1141-2017-the-right-to-work-our-shared-responsibility> Accessed 15 April 2019.
- 11 Manning, (1998), op. cit., 5.
- 12 Bishop Vincent Long, op. cit., provides labour force statistics from the Australian Bureau of Statistics demonstrating this point.
- 13 Pope Francis, (2013), Evangelii Gaudium, n 53-4.
- 14 Bishop Christopher Saunders, (2014), “Putting People First: The call for an economy of social inclusion” in Saunders, op. cit., 28.

Office for Social Justice
Australian Catholic Bishops Conference

24-32 O’Riordan Street Alexandria NSW 2015 Australia

T 02 8306 3499 E admin@acsjc.org.au www.socialjustice.catholic.org.au

