About the Symposium

The ground-breaking synthesis of bishops, theologians and experienced educators will explore themes of direct relevance to empowering prophetic leadership, in the rapidly changing Australian Catholic schools context. The symposium will present a relevant anthropological approach to understanding contemporary Australian culture. Such insights allow authentic theological engagement with all the people in our schools.

What You Will Learn

Theological reflection is a formidable tool in practical theology, and is of exceptional power in the formation of leaders and practitioners. A theological understanding of dialogue and a vision of a learning community inspired by the mission of the Church are foundational to a distinctive Catholic pedagogy. Some of the many questions which will be addressed are: What conditions are needed to enable a more explicit dialogue between Catholic faith and the diverse cultures and lives of both students and teachers in a Catholic learning community? How might leadership engage learning communities in dialogue?

The symposium offers delegates the opportunity to engage with fellow leaders in education, along with bishops and theologians on the crucial topic of Catholic leadership, mission and identity. The methodology consists of a dynamic synthesis between theory, cutting edge research and practical application to school contexts.

Delegates at the symposium are offered insights into contemporary secular culture, together with examples of outstanding peer leadership practice with regard to Catholic mission and identity which they can adapt to their own school contexts.
